New York City Police Officer Shot in Head, Suspect in Custody

(Reuters) A New York City plainclothes police officer was seriously injured when he was shot in the head on Saturday while attempting to question a man from his cruiser, and authorities said a suspect had been arrested and was in custody. The officer, identified by police as Brian Moore, 25, was in critical but stable condition following surgery at Jamaica Hospital Medical Center about four hours after the shooting, a hospital representative told reporters on Saturday night. Police arrested Demetrius Blackwell, 35, who shot at Moore and another officer at about 6:15 p.m. while they were in their car in a middle-class neighborhood in the borough of Queens, New York Police Commissioner William Bratton told reporters. Bratton said the officers were trying to question Blackwell, who had an extensive criminal background, after they observed him appearing to adjust an object in his waistband. Blackwell "removed a firearm from his waistband and ... fired several times into the vehicle," Bratton said, adding that "both officers were still seated in the vehicle and did not have an opportunity to get out or return fire." Local media reports said Moore had been placed in a medically induced coma, and that Blackwell had been paroled recently after serving seven years in prison for attempted murder.

Significant Events – International

Thousands of Migrants Rescued at Sea

(BBC News) Nearly 3,700 migrants were rescued from boats near the coast of Libya on Saturday and early on Sunday, the Italian coastguard said. A spokesman said they expected rescue operations to continue throughout Sunday. All of those pulled from boats were being taken to Italy. Italian authorities said the migrants were rescued by Italian and French navy vessels in 17 separate operations. At least 1,750 migrants have died so far this year attempting to cross the Mediterranean Sea to Italy. Many more are expected to make the crossing as smugglers take advantage of calmer weather.

Thai Mass Grave Held Bodies of 26 Suspected Trafficking Victims

(Reuters) Dozens of police and volunteers have exhumed 26 bodies at a mass grave near a suspected human trafficking camp on a hillside deep in a southern Thai jungle, police said on Saturday. The digging site, in Sadao district in Songkhla province, yielded five bodies on Friday and 21 more on Saturday, all believed to be migrants from Myanmar and Bangladesh. Authorities found three survivors at the camp, two of them children. "A total of 26 bodies were uncovered - 24 men, one woman and one unknown," said Police General Jaruporn Suramane, adding the operation was now completed. There had been estimates of up to 30 bodies buried at the site. Identifying victims could take time as relatives would need to travel from Myanmar and Bangladesh to offer DNA samples for testing and to identify belongings, where possible, said Police General Jaruporn Suramane. Human Rights Watch called for an independent investigation with U.N. involvement to find out what took place at the site.

Active Weather Warnings, Watches and Advisories by County: http://www.wrh.noaa.gov/sto/brief/wwa_bc_cal.php

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

Dry conditions will persist across northwest California this weekend with seasonal temperatures near the coast and above normal temperatures inland.

Medford Weather:

Mostly dry and warm weather will persist through today. High temperatures today will be similar to Saturday's highs, but on Monday high temperatures will be several degrees cooler as the marine influence and cloud cover increases over the area. A transition to a cooler and showery weather pattern will occur Monday night into Tuesday. Associated precipitation will be light and mostly limited to the west side.

Reno Weather:

Warm temperatures with chances for isolated showers and storms will continue today and into early next week. A low pressure system dropping out of the Gulf of Alaska will provide the potential for an unsettled and cooler weather pattern by midweek.

San Francisco Weather:

A relatively deep marine layer and persistent onshore flow will maintain areas of night and morning low clouds through the middle of the week, along with temperatures near to slightly below normal. An upper level low is then forecast to develop over California by Thursday. This low will mix out the marine layer but also maintain relatively cool weather conditions into the second half of the week. There is also a slight chance of showers with this weather system, mainly across the southern portion of the forecast area from late Thursday night through Friday.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Warm temperatures with a slight chance of mountain thunderstorms continue through Tuesday. Cooler and more unsettled weather will set in mid-to-late this week.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure over the region will provide for above normal daytime temperatures over the area through Monday. A low pressure center will push into the Pacific Northwest on Tuesday, and then drop southward later in the week bringing cooler temperatures and unsettled conditions to the area.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Night to morning low clouds and fog will occur through midweek in onshore flow and a low system. Another low will move in Thursday for possible precipitation into the end of the week. Temperatures should remain near normal all week long.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

A weak low pressure system off the California coast will move inland through Southern California on Monday. This will bring cooling and more night and morning low clouds and patchy fog as the marine layer deepens and onshore flow strengthens. There is also a slight chance of afternoon and early evening thunderstorms on Monday, mainly for the mountains. Onshore flow will continue through Friday as a colder low pressure system moves southward through the Western States bringing below average temperatures for inland areas, gusty west winds in the mountains and deserts, and chances for mainly light precipitation along and west of the mountains Thursday and Friday. Conditions will be dry and a little warmer for Saturday under weak high pressure.

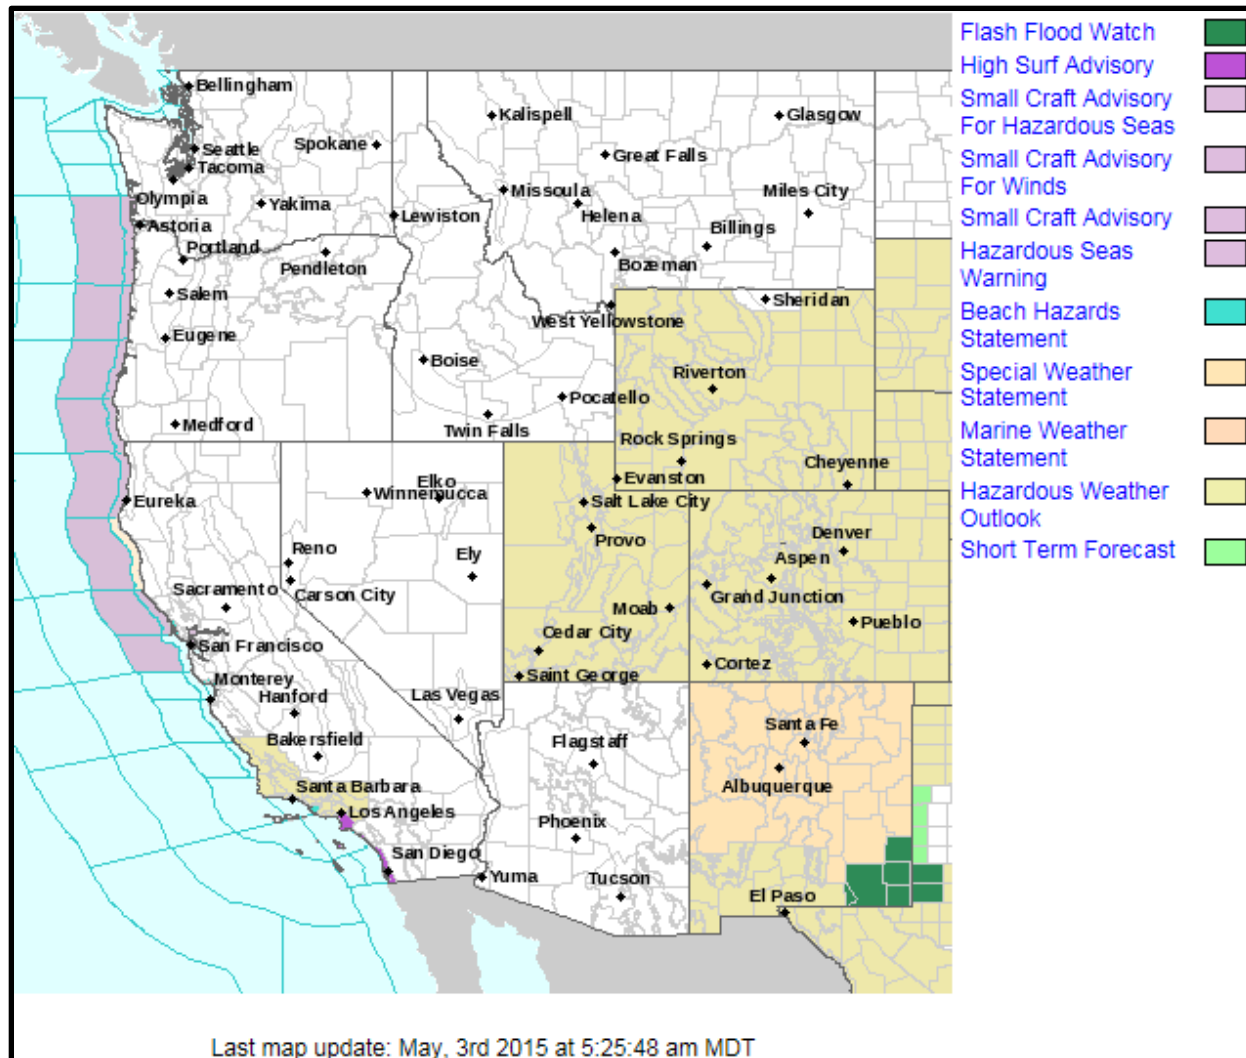

Southeast California Weather:

A series of Pacific weather disturbances are forecast to move into the region through Tuesday resulting in a cooling trend. A much larger and colder disturbance is forecast to move into the region Monday and Tuesday for a good chance of showers and thunderstorms area-wide. Clearing is expected Wednesday however another low pressure system is forecast to move into the region later in the week. This late week system is expected to be dry but will lead to another cooling trend along with increased afternoon breeziness.
